Diversity

"Every Single one of us is Different"

- All of us are different - we look differently, think differently, and come from diverse backgrounds. Even generationally, we are different ...Generation Z, Millennial, Generation X, Baby Boomer.
- We can learn from our differences, but we must have a level of understanding and respect for each other.
- This cultural diversity is about valuing everyone because of their differences.

What generation do you identify with, and do you respect other coworkers that are different generationally?

Is there a difference between tolerating and respecting differences?
